W. W. FELGATE PRESIDENT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

All seats were filled at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Monday night when W. W. Felgate was elected president by a unanimous vote, to the vacancy caused by the resignation of James N. Hawks.

"Billy's" fighting spirit was aroused by some of his friends telling him there would be a fierce fight for the office by a candidate who was gathering proxies and expected to elect himself by voting the absent members, so when no opposition developed and he discovered that he was the unanimous choice of the chamber he was delightedly surprised.

After thanking the members for the honor conferred upon him, President Felgate said he had rather be president of the Chamber of Commerce of Sierra Madre, the best town on earth, than president of the United States. He asked for a united support and said that with unity, harmony, determination and perseverance the chamber could accomplish anything.

Mrs. J. H. Wright read an editorial in the Literary Digest commenting on a letter by Herbert Hoover in the same issue, describing the destitute and starving condition of children in certain European countries, and asked that the chamber take some action. A committee was immediately appointed by the chair and in ten minutes had received subscriptions for $156.00 of which $106 was cash. A telegram was sent to the editor of the Literary Digest conveying this information.

The resignation of the secretary was accepted, to take effect Dec. 1. This step is made necessary by his removal to another city.

Dean Shaw as chairman of the committee on West Central lights, reported that little or no work had been done because he did not approve of the plan. He made an eloquent plea for a wider, broader scope of improvement, lights and sidewalks to cover the entire city. He urged that no half way measures be employed when it might be possible to accomplish it all with increased taxation—if the coming legislature increases the limit of tax rate. No further instructions were given the committee.

Earl Topping, in answer, made an earnest appeal for lights on West Central. He said he believed it was possible to secure them now instead of waiting several years for the greater improvement, and that he did not believe the people would vote for a general increase in taxes in their present state of mind. He urged that we take what we could get while we could get it.

Ex-Senator George J. Burns and Albert Chappell delivered 30 minute anti-Japanese speeches and both were given generous applause.

THE RED CROSS ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Plans are being completed locally for the forthcoming Red Cross Annual Roll Call or membership drive, which will occur November 14 to 22 inclusive. Committees are being formed to undertake the work of putting the local branch of the American Red Cross in the class of patriotic communities that see the necessity for financial support for the organization that is doing such a wonderful work for disabled soldiers and sailors.

It is agreed that the activities of Los Angeles County Chapter of the Red Cross grow day by day. This is due to the fact that the government is sending to Southern California large numbers of disabled veterans in the hope that the southland's climate will restore these men to good health. Many of them are without funds and the Red Cross is the one organization that is now giving these men, many of whom have their families with them, financial as well as other support.

The drive will be conducted in an intensive manner, the citizens generally being expected to become members of this organization. The Red Cross annual membership is only $1. It becomes the patriotic duty of every person to enroll as a member of this organization.

Local firms will vie with each other in 100 per cent membership, in other words, every employee of the firm a Red Cross member.

This community is expected to do its part. The committee members will begin a systematic canvass within the next few days in an endeavor to reach the quota of 700 for Sierra Madre.

BACK ON THE WAGON

D. G. Stephens, who has been "field man" for the Monrovia Laundry, covering a large territory in the San Gabriel valley, is back on the collecting truck at this place, and will serve his old customers again.

BUILDING SIERRA MADRE

It is needless to mention the fact that thousands of eastern people are pouring into Sunny Southern California, and with the first cold snap back there the railroads will be running extra and special trains out here.

Already the housing facilities of Southern California are taxed to the utmost. People are sleeping in shacks, tents and automobiles. Where are they to go when the greater crowd comes in the near future? If Sierra Madre could advertise that she had a thousand empty houses to rent or to sell, they would be occupied the following day.

There are a number of people here who have idle money. Why not put it to work building homes? Not to benefit Sierra Madre or the homeless visitors, but for profit to themselves. Idle money is of no benefit to anyone, but put it to work where the profits are assured and it benefits all.

Sierra Madre could double, treble, her population if enough new homes were built quickly. In neighboring towns and cities frantic efforts are being made to build more and more and still more houses for sale and for rent. In Sierra Madre three, possibly four, houses are being built to sell, all the rest, nearly forty, are being built for the owners to live in. A lot at $500, a house that costs $8000, will sell before it is finished for $4,000 or more. Isn't that profit enough for the use of your money for 60 days?

Why should our Chamber of Commerce advertise Sierra Madre and endeavor to bring people here to live, when we have no place to house them?

Last summer the News suggested a building corporation for just this purpose. Mr. Webb wrote an article offering to invest in such a company. For lack of cooperation he took his money to Pasadena and built houses there. We believe individuals can build one, two or three houses each, make big money for themselves and at the same time build up Sierra Madre with a good permanent class of citizens. We say individuals because quick action is necessary and it takes time to organize a company, incorporate, etc.

Vacant property is cheap in Sierra Madre. You can buy lots here for about half the price asked (and given) in neighboring cities. Don't you believe it? Go to Pasadena, Pomona, Long Beach, Monrovia, or Glendale and try to buy a lot in a good district and see for yourself.

Buy a lot here, put up $1000 and you can finance the balance by borrowing on the property, then sell and come clean with a handsome profit, a legitimate profit, and you will be doing a good turn for Sierra Madre also.

PILGRIMAGE TO ST. RITA'S

On Sunday, Nov. 7, there will be another large pilgrimage to St. Rita's Shrine in this city. The principal ceremony will commence at 3:00 p.m. If the weather is favorable, between one thousand and two thousand visitors from Los Angeles and other surrounding cities are expected to be present. The Pacific Electric will be running a number of special trains to accommodate the visitors.

This will be the third pilgrimage, since March of this year, to this now well known shrine, the only one in Southern California.

The church grounds have lately been put in shape for the occasion in order to accommodate the overflow attendance.

ENTERTAINED IN PASADENA

A number of Sierra Madre ladies attended a tea Wednesday afternoon which was given at the home of Mrs. L. L. Krebs at Pasadena in honor of her house guest, Miss Florence Murphy of Virginia.

PAINTS IN SHOW WINDOW

Mr. C. A. Tope, a local artist living at 33 W. Montecito, is painting landscapes and animal life pictures in the show windows of Roland Adams used furniture store. He works rapidly and the product is of real artistic merit. Free standing room on the sidewalk and the public is invited.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Mary and Janet Allen entertained a number of friends last Saturday evening with a masked party.

The table was prettily decorated in the Hallowe'en colors, and the place cards were designed with pumpkins, black cats and witches.

The season's games and other happy diversions were enjoyed and the guests were Emily, Cecily and William Allen of Pasadena, Ethel Karpf, Betty Moore, Dolores Oswald, Sara Schwartz, Daphne Alley, Charles Hull and Richard Lees of Sierra Madre.

WIDE AWAKE

What would Sierra Madre do to the slanderer that said the town was asleep, today? Yet less than two years ago that was not an uncommon expression, in fact, many people admitted it—and said they were comfortable and did not want to be wakened up.

How times do change. Sierra Madre today is the liveliest, wide awake town in this part of the state. Joe Sadler said, yesterday, that his trade had doubled during the last year, and the News does not claim that his advertisement in this paper is entirely responsible. No sir. Sierra Madre is growing and her people are wide awake. Other merchants tell the same story—increased trade.

Our people are better acquainted than they ever have been before. They are more friendly, more neighborly, more harmonious.

Do some of you old timers remember the "burro fight" that divided the town into factions? Nothing like that now. Why, even the seven Democrats admit they may have been wrong in their guess and receive the friendly gibes of their "late enemies" in a friendly spirit.

There might be a difference of personal opinion, but there is perfect harmony on the subject of Sierra Madre and her welfare, and every citizen is wide awake to her numerous advantages and doesn't hesitate to say so. A sleepy town? Huh! Ancient history.

WHY IS A COMMITTEE?

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last month a committee was appointed to investigate the attitude of property owners on West Central avenue regarding ornamental street lights on that thoroughfare.

At the request of the chairman of this committee, the secretary spent almost an entire day preparing a list of property owners and a diagram showing front footage of each property, and mailed it to him promptly. Then the chairman had a vision, a vision of splendid sidewalks all over town and ornamental street lights on the principal streets. Fine and dandy. Not a single citizen will oppose that vision and every single taxpayer will heartily agree that it is just what the city needs. Everybody will be 100% for that vision—if the chairman will foot the bills.

Theory is a mighty fine thing and without imagination the world would stand still. Visions are beautiful things to contemplate and orate about and it's a lot easier to dream visions and make speeches than it is to hustle—but results count.

After talking with several of the larger property owners on West Central the writer is confident that an earnest and energetic solicitation would procure the signatures of the owners of 51% of the front footage on that street. They appreciate the fact that the enhanced value of their real estate would cover the trifling expense many times over. Civic pride has also been mentioned.

This committee was appointed for a specific purpose by a unanimous vote of the Chamber of Commerce. It was appointed after a more or less thorough discussion of the question and we would like to inquire, since when has it become the fashion for one man to override the will and vote of the majority of an organization simply because he changed his mind and decided that his way is better.

Maybe the property owners on West Central do not want street lights, and maybe they do. No one knows for certain, but the Chamber of Commerce wanted to know and that's why they voted to have the committee appointed. That was the committee's job.

CHILDREN'S PARTY

Mrs. S. M. Karicofe entertained with a Hallowe'en party for her children last Saturday evening. About ten little guests were present and the time was pleasantly spent in playing games.

"Yep; I went down to the jail to see him the other day."
 "That was a friendly thing to do. What did you talk about?"
 "Oh, outdoor life."

It Runs Wild.

 "I suppose so."
 "Then what happens to the weather?"

Webster=Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

"SHE'S THE FUTURE MRS. W."

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, man's man, 39 years young, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $100,000. He is dreaming of cool baths, silk pajamas and ham and eggs. But he looks like a hobo to the porter and the conductor. His way of changing their views gives a hint of the mettle of the man. Then he meets a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over for the first time in all his days. He eliminates the offending man after the style of the man's man the world over. Being what he is and also girl-shy, he does not take advantage of his opportunity. But he just had to find out who the no-longer-distressed lady is, being determined to hatch up a scheme to meet her again—and marry her. She is Dolores Ruey, the nearest approach to a home he has known in twenty years. There he is offered a $25,000-a-year job with the certainty of a fortune by a capitalist friend, Edward P. Jerome. While he is hesitating, being loath to go to work again so soon, he receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go 50-50 with him on the profits. Thereupon he turns down the big job and decides to answer the call of friendship and adventure to Sobrante.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

"Well," Webster retorted humorously, "it isn't exactly what you might term a ruling passion. I like to make it, but there's more fun spending it. I've made $100,000, and now I want to go blow it—and I'm going to. Do not try to argue with me. I'm a lunatic and I will have my way. If I didn't go tearing off to Sobrante and join forces with Bill Geary, there to play the game, red or black, I'd feel as if I had done something low and mean and small. The boy's appealed to me, and I have made my answer. If I come back alive but broke, you know in your heart you'll give me the best job you have."

"You win," poor Jerome admitted. "Hold the job open 30 days. At the end of that period I'll give you a definite answer, Neddy."

"I sniff excitement and adventure and profit in Sobrante and I've just got to look-see. I'm like an old burro staked out knee-deep in alfalfa just now. I won't take kindly to the pack—"

"And like an old burro, you won't be happy until you've sneaked through a hole in the fence to get out into a stubble-field and starve." Jerome swore half-heartedly and promulgated the trite proverb that life is just one blank thing after the other—an inchoate mass of liver and disappointment.

"Do you find it so?" Webster queried sympathetically.

Suspecting that he was being twitted, Jerome looked up sharply, prepared to wither Webster with that glance. But no, the man was absolutely serious; whereupon Jerome realized the futility of further argument and gave John Stuart Webster up for a total loss. Still, he could not help smiling as he reflected how Webster had planned a year of quiet enjoyment and Fate had granted him one brief evening. He marveled that Webster could be so light-hearted and contented under the circumstances.

Webster read his thoughts. "Good-bye, old man," he said, and extended his hand. "Don't worry about me. Allah is always kind to fools, my friend."

was up betimes.

Nine o'clock found him in the office of his friend Joe Daingerfeld, of the Bingham engineering works, where, within the hour, he had in his characteristically decisive fashion purchased the machinery for a ten-stamp mill. It was a nice order, and Daingerfeld was delighted.

"This is going to cost you about half your fortune, Jack," he informed Webster when the order was finally made up.

Webster grinned. "You don't suppose I'm cheap enough to pay for it now, do you, Joe?" he queried.

"I'm going first to scout the country and in the meantime keep all this stuff in your warehouse until I authorize you by cable to ship, when you can draw on me at sight for the entire invoice with bill of lading attached. If, upon investigation, I find that this mine isn't all my partner thinks it is, I'll cable a cancellation, and you can tear that nice fat order up and forget it."

From Daingerfeld's office Webster went forth to purchase a steamer trunk, his railway ticket and sleeping car reservation—after which he returned to his hotel and set about packing for the journey.

Old Neddy Jerome, as sour and cross as a setting hen, accompanied him in the taxicab to the station, loth to let him escape and pleading to the last, in a forlorn hope that Jack Webster's better nature would triumph over his friendship and boyish yearning for adventure. He clung to Webster's arm as they walked slowly down the track and paused at the steps of the car containing the wanderer's reservation, just as a porter, carrying some hand baggage, passed them by, followed by a girl in a green tailor-made suit. As she passed, John Stuart Webster looked fairly into her face, started as if hee-stung, and hastily lifted his hat. The girl briefly returned his scrutiny with sudden interest, decided she did not know him, and reproved him with a glance that even passed old Neddy Jerome did not fail to assimilate.

"Wow, wow!" he murmured. "The next time you try that, Johnny Webster, be sure you're right—"

"Good land o' Goshen, Neddy," Webster replied. "Fry me in bread crumbs, if that isn't the same girl! Let me go, Neddy. Quick! Good-bye, old chap. I'm on my way."

"Nonsense! The train doesn't pull out for seven minutes yet. Who is she, John, and why does she excite you so?"

"Who is she, you ancient horse thief! Why, if I have my way—and I'm certainly going to try to have it—she's the future Mrs. W."

"Alas! Poor Yorick, I knowed him well," Jerome answered. "Take a tip from the old man, John. I've been through the mill and I know. Never marry a girl that can freeze you with a glance. It isn't safe. By the way, what's the fair charmer's name?"

"I've got it down in my memorandum book, but I can't recall it this minute—Spanish name."

"John, my dear boy, be careful," Neddy Jerome counseled. "Stick to your own kind of people—Is this a—er—a nice girl, John?"

"How do I know—I mean, how dare you ask? Of course, she's nice. Can't you see she is? And besides, why should you be so fearful—"

"I'll have you understand, young man, that I have considerable interest in the girl you're going to marry. By the way, where did you first meet this girl? Who introduced you?"

"I haven't met her, and I've never been introduced," Webster complained, and poured forth the tale of his adventure on the train from Death Valley. Neddy was very sympathetic.

"Well, no wonder she didn't recognize you when you saluted her to-night," he agreed. "Thought you were another brute of a man trying to make ash. By thunder, Jack, I'm afraid closed Saturday afternoon."

and God bless you. If your fit of insanity passes within 90 days, cable me; and if you're broke, stick the Colorado Con. for the cable tolls."

"Good old wagon!" Webster replied affectionately. Then he shook hands and climbed aboard the train. The instant he disappeared in the vestibule, however, Neddy Jerome waddled rapidly down the track to Car 9, climbed aboard, and made his way to Lower 6. The young lady in the green tailor-made suit was there, looking idly out of the window.

"Young lady," Jerome began, "may I presume to address you for a moment on a matter of great importance to you? Don't be afraid of me, my dear. I'm old enough to be your father, and besides, I'm one of the nicest old men you ever met."

She could not forbear a smile. "Very well, sir," she replied.

Neddy Jerome produced a pencil and card. "Please write your name on this card," he pleaded, "and I'll telegraph what I want to say to you. There'll be a man coming through this car in a minute, and I don't want him to see me here. Please trust me, young lady."

The young lady did not trust him, however, although she wrote on the card. Jerome thanked her and fled as fast as his fat old legs could carry him. Under the station arch he read the card.

"Henrietta Wilkins," he murmured. "By the gods, one would never suspect a name like that belonged to a face like that. By jingo, it would be strange if that madman persuaded her to marry him. I hope he does. If I'm any judge of character, Jack Webster won't be cruel enough to chain that vision to Sobrante; and besides, she's liable to make him decide who's most popular with him—Henrietta or Billy Geary. If she does, I'll play Geary to lose. Well! Needs must when the devil drives." And he entered the station telegraph office and commenced to write.

An hour later Miss Dolores Ruey, alias Henrietta Wilkins, was handed this remarkably verbose and truly candid telegram:

"Miss Henrietta Wilkins, Lower 6, Car 9, on board train 24.

"Do you recall the bewhiskered, ragged individual you met on the S. P. L. A. & S. L. train in Death valley ten days ago? He lifted his hat to you tonight, and you almost killed him with a look. It did not occur to him that you would not recognize him disguised as a gentleman, and he lifted his hat on impulse. Do not hold it against him. The sight of you again set his reason tottering on its throne, and he told me his sad story."

"This man, John Stuart Webster, is wealthy, single, forty, fine and crazy as a March hare. He is in love with you. You might do worse than fall in love with him. He is the best mining engineer in the world, and he is now aboard the same train with you, en route to New Orleans, thence to take the steamer to Buenaventura, Sobrante, C. A., where he is to meet another lunatic and finance a hole in the ground. I do not want him to go to Sobrante. If you marry him, he will not. If you do not marry him, you still might arrange to make him listen to reason. If you can induce him to come to work for me within the next 90 days, whether you marry him or not, I will give you $5,000 the day he reports on the job. Please bear in mind that he does not know I am doing this. If he did, he would kill me, but business is business, and this is a plain business proposition. I am putting you wise. If you will know your power and can exercise it if you care to earn the money. If not, please forget about it. At any rate, please do me the favor to communicate with me on the subject, if at all interested."

"Edward P. Jerome, President Colorado Consolidated Mines, Ltd., Care Engineers' Club."

The girl read and reread this telegram several times, and presently a slow little smile commenced to creep around the corners of her adorable mouth.

"I believe that amazing old gentleman is absolutely dependable," was the decision at which she ultimately arrived, and calling for a telegraph blank, she wired the old schemer:

"Five thousand not enough money. Make it $10,000 and I will guarantee to deliver the man within 90 days. I stay on this train to New Orleans."

"HENRIETTA."

That telegram arrived at the Engineers' club about midnight, and pursuant to instructions, the night bar-keeper read it and phoned the contents to Neddy Jerome, who promptly telephoned his reply to the telegraph office, and then sat on the edge of his bed, scratching his toes and meditating.

"That's a remarkable young woman," he decided, "and business to her finger tips. Well, I've done my part, and it's now up to Jack Webster to protect himself in the clinches and breakaways."

About daylight a black hand passed Neddy Jerome's reply through the berth curtains to Dolores Ruey. She read:

"Accept. When you deliver the goods, communicate with me and get your money.

"JEROME."

She snuggled back among the pillows and considered the various aspects of this amazing contract which she had undertaken with a perfect stranger. Hour after hour she lay there, thinking over this preposterous situation, and the more she weighed it, the more interesting and attractive the proposition appeared. But one consideration troubled her. How would the unknown knight manage an introduction? Or, if he failed to manage it, how was she to overcome that obstacle?

"Oh, dear," she murmured, "I do hope he's brave."

She need not have worried. Hours before, the object of her thought had settled all that to his own complete satisfaction, and as a consequence was sleeping peacefully and gaining strength for whatever of fortune, good or ill, the morrow might bring forth.

CHAPTER IV.

Day was dawning in Buenaventura, republic of Sobrante, as invariably it dawns in the tropics—without extended preliminary symptoms. The soft, silvery light of a full moon that had stayed out scandalously late had merged imperceptibly into gray; the gray was swiftly yielding place to a faint crimson that was spreading and deepening upward athwart the east.

In the patio of Mother Jenks' establishment in the Calle de Concordia, No. 19, the first shafts of morning light were filtering obliquely through the orange trees and creeping in under the deep, Gothic-arched veranda flanking the western side of the patio. Presently, through the silent reaches of the Calle de Concordia, the sound of a prodigious knocking and thumping echoed, as of some fretful individual seeking admission at the street door of El Buen Amigo, by which euphonious designation Mother Jenks' caravansary was known to the public of Buenaventura. In the second story, front, a window slid back and a woman's voice, husky with that huskiness that speaks so accusingly of cigarettes and alcohol, demanded:

"Quien es? Who is it? Que quiere usted? What do you want?"

"Ye might dispense wit' that paraquet conversation whin addressin' the likes av me," a voice replied. "Tis me—Cafferty. I have a cablegram Leber give me to deliver—"

"Gawd's truth! Would yer wake the 'ole 'ouse with yer 'ammering?"

"All right, I'll not say another word!"

Without the portal stood Don Juan Cafetero, of whom a word or two before proceeding.

To begin, Don Juan Cafetero was not his real name, but rather a free Spanish translation of the Gaelic John Cafferty. Mr. Cafferty was an exile of Erin with a horrible thirst. He had first arrived in Sobrante some five years before, as section boss in the employ of the little foreign-owned narrow-gauge railway which ran from Buenaventura on the Caribbean coast to San Miguel de Padua, up-country where the nitrate beds were located.

Prior to his advent the railroad people had tried many breeds of section boss without visible results, until a Chicago man, who had come to Sobrante to install an inter-communicating telephone system in the government buildings, suggested to the superintendent of the road, who was a German, that the men made for bosses come from Erin's isle; wherefore Mr. Cafferty had been imported at a price of $5 a day gold. Result—a marked improvement in the road bed and consequently the train schedules, and the ultimate loss of the Cafferty soul.

Something in the climate of Sobrante must have appealed to a touch of laissez faire in Don Juan's amiable nature, for in the course of time he had taken unto himself, without bell or book, after the fashion of the proletariat of Sobrante, the daughter of one Esteban Manuel Enrique Jose Maria Pasqual y Miramontes, an estimable, but singularly glad to have his daughter off his hands and no questions asked. Following the fashion of the country, however, Esteban had forthwith moved the remainder of his numerous progeny under the mantle of Don Juan Cafetero's philanthropy, and resigned a position which for many years he had not enjoyed—to wit: salting and packing green hides at a local abattoir. This foolhardy economic move had so incensed Don Juan that in a fit of pique he spurned his father-in-law (we must call Esteban something and so why split hairs?) under the tails of his camisa, with such vigor as to sever forever the friendly relations hitherto existing between the families. Mrs. Cafferty (again we transgress, but what of it?) subsequently passed away in child birth, and no sooner had she been decently buried than Don Juan took a week off to drown his sorrows.

In this condition he had encountered Esteban Manuel Enrique Jose Maria Pasqual y Miramontes, and called him out of his name. In the altercation that ensued Esteban, fully convinced that he had received the nub end of the transaction from start to finish, cut Don Juan severely; Don Juan had thereupon slain Esteban with a .44-caliber revolver and upon emerging from the railroad hospital a month later had been tried by a Sobrantean magistrate and fined the sum of $20,000, legal tender of the republic of Sobrante. Of course, he had paid it off within six months from his wages as section boss, but the memory of the injustice always rankled him, and gradually he moved down the scale of society from section boss to day laborer, day laborer to tropical tramp, and tropical tramp to beach-comber, in which latter state he had now existed for several months.

To return to Mother Jenks.

Before Don Juan could even utter a maternal greeting, Mother Jenks laid finger to lip and silenced him. "Go back to Leber's and return in an hour," she whispered. "I have my reasons for wantin' that bloomin' cablegram delivered later."

Don Juan hadn't the least idea what Mother Jenks' reasons might be, but he presumed she was up to some chicanery, and so he winked his blood-shot eye very knowingly and nodded his acquiescence in the program.

When he had gone, Mother Jenks went behind the bar and fortified herself with her morning's morning—which rite having been performed, her sleep-benumbed brain livened up immediately.

"Gord's truth!" the lady murmured. "An' me about to turn him adrift for the lawst fortnight! Well for 'im 'e allers hadmired the picture o' my sainted 'Enery, as was the spittin' image of his own fawther. 'Evings! 'Ell's bells! But that was a bit of a tight squeak! CHAPTER IV.

Day was dawning in Buenaventura, republic of Sobrante, as invariably it dawns in the tropics—without extended preliminary symptoms. The soft, silvery light of a full moon that had stayed out scandalously late had merged imperceptibly into gray; the gray was swiftly yielding place to a faint crimson that was spreading and deepening upward athwart the east.

In the patio of Mother Jenks' establishment in the Calle de Concordia, No. 19, the first shafts of morning light were filtering obliquely through the orange trees and creeping in under the deep, Gothic-arched veranda flanking the western side of the patio. Presently, through the silent reaches of the Calle de Concordia, the sound of a prodigious knocking and thumping echoed, as of some fretful individual seeking admission at the street door of El Buen Amigo, by which euphonious designation Mother Jenks' caravansary was known to the public of Buenaventura. In the second story, front, a window slid back and a woman's voice, husky with that huskiness that speaks so accusingly of cigarettes and alcohol, demanded:

"Quien es? Who is it? Que quiere usted? What do you want?"

"Ye might dispense wit' that paraquet conversation whin addressin' the likes av me," a voice replied. "Tis me—Cafferty. I have a cablegram Leber give me to deliver—"

"Gawd's truth! Would yer wake the 'ole 'ouse with yer 'ammering?"

"All right, I'll not say another word!"

Without the portal stood Don Juan Cafetero, of whom a word or two before proceeding.

To begin, Don Juan Cafetero was not his real name, but rather a free Spanish translation of the Gaelic John Cafferty. Mr. Cafferty was an exile of Erin with a horrible thirst. He had first arrived in Sobrante some five years before, as section boss in the employ of the little foreign-owned narrow-gauge railway which ran from Buenaventura on the Caribbean coast to San Miguel de Padua, up-country where the nitrate beds were located.

Prior to his advent the railroad people had tried many breeds of section boss without visible results, until a Chicago man, who had come to Sobrante to install an inter-communicating telephone system in the government buildings, suggested to the superintendent of the road, who was a German, that the men made for bosses come from Erin's isle; wherefore Mr. Cafferty had been imported at a price of $5 a day gold. Result—a marked improvement in the road bed and consequently the train schedules, and the ultimate loss of the Cafferty soul.

Something in the climate of Sobrante must have appealed to a touch of laissez faire in Don Juan's amiable nature, for in the course of time he had taken unto himself, without bell or book, after the fashion of the proletariat of Sobrante, the daughter of one Esteban Manuel Enrique Jose Maria Pasqual y Miramontes, an estimable, but singularly glad to have his daughter off his hands and no questions asked. Following the fashion of the country, however, Esteban had forthwith moved the remainder of his numerous progeny under the mantle of Don Juan Cafetero's philanthropy, and resigned a position which for many years he had not enjoyed—to wit: salting and packing green hides at a local abattoir. This foolhardy economic move had so incensed Don Juan that in a fit of pique he spurned his father-in-law (we must call Esteban something and so why split hairs?) under the tails of his camisa, with such vigor as to sever forever the friendly relations hitherto existing between the families. Mrs. Cafferty (again we transgress, but what of it?) subsequently passed away in child birth, and no sooner had she been decently buried than Don Juan took a week off to drown his sorrows.

That Nagging Backache

Are you tortured with a throbbing backache? Suffer sharp pains at every sudden move? Evening find you "all played out"? Perhaps you have been working too hard and getting too little rest. This may have weakened your kidneys, bringing on that tired feeling and dull, nagging backache. You may have headaches and dizziness, too, with annoying kidney irregularities. Don't wait. Help the weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Idaho Case

C. F. Rodgers, Main St., Wardner, Idaho, says: "By spells my kidneys didn't work right. I had to get up often at night to pass the secretions which contained a sediment. I was hardly able to get around because of the pains in my back. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they rid me of the kidney trouble entirely."

Rents Hurt Ghost Industry.

In England desperate people in search of houses to rent or buy are advertising that ghosts are no drawback. Any one who happens to own a hitherto unrented house because tradition says it is haunted is assured that the seekers for a domicile will accept it at the rental asked for regardless of the haunter or hauntings. It is suspected that in England, as in several other countries, ghosts of landlords would be less objectionable than those of other folk. Whatever his losses in the past, the landlord as a rule is regarded in these days with deep suspicion as a profiteer. In many cases this attitude is probably unfair; there are some considerate landlords.—Toronto Globe.

GOOD ROADS*FEDERAL AID FOR HIGHWAYS

Operations Aggregate in Length Nine Times Distance From New York to San Francisco.

The unprecedented stimulus given highway construction in the United States in the four years that have passed since the federal government entered upon its policy of aiding road improvement, is shown by the fact that road operations under the federal aid road act thus far initiated aggregate in length nine times the distance from New York to San Francisco, according to Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture. The federal government's share in this stupendous undertaking is greater than the cost of the Panama canal. The participation of the national government in highway improvement marked a departure from a policy which had been followed for nearly a century. Federal co-operation with the states on approximately a "50-50" basis has counted more than any other factor, says Mr. MacDonald, in initiating highway construction that is being carried on under adequate supervision, and in accord with a program co-ordinating local, state and national needs.

Second only in importance to the size of the present road-building program is the excellence of the character of the roads being built. Sixty per cent of the total allotment of federal funds which has been approved to date will be spent for roads of such durable types as bituminous concrete, Portland cement concrete, and vitrified brick. These roads, when built, will increase by 7,000 miles the total of 14,400 miles of roads of this class which existed in the United States before the federal-aid road law was passed. But these figures by no means represent the total mileage affected.

In 1915 the total expenditure for roads and bridges by all the states and local governments was $207,000,000, while this year the estimated funds available for main road construction are nearly three times that amount, or $633,000,000. In all, federal funds to the amount of $266,750,000 have been apportioned among 48 states without a suggestion of favoritism—so adequate are the provisions for a just apportionment.

One of the early and most far-reaching results directly attributable to the adoption of the federal-aid program was the creation of adequate state highway departments in 17 states which previously had either no state department, or departments insufficiently equipped. Within one year after the passage of the federal-aid road act more constructive state highway legislation was placed upon the statute books than had ever been enacted in a similar period in the history of the country.

The insistence of the government upon the construction of federal-aid roads under the supervision of engineers of the state departments has resulted in placing a much larger proportion of road work under skilled direction. In 1915, the year before the federal-aid act was passed, only 30 per cent of the money for roads and bridges built in the United States was expended under the supervision of state highway departments. This year these departments will exercise control over fully 80 per cent of the large sums that will be spent for road building.

ARRANGEMENT OF OILING SYSTEM

Installation of Drain Cock Overcomes Frequent Stoppage of Lubrication.

FIND TROUBLE IN AIR LOCK

In One Case Difficulty Was Overcome By Making Change as Shown in Illustration—Easy Task to Open the Petcock.

Many small automobiles are equipped with a constant-level splash system of engine lubrication in which a shaft-driven gear pump draws oil from a chamber cast in one piece with the lower part of the crank case. This pump discharges the oil through a copper tube to a sight-feed fitting on the dash, from which it goes to the crank case by gravity.

Air Lock Troublesome.

In one such case frequent stoppages of the oil flow were experienced, and when the parts were cleaned, little dirt was found, and the system worked temporarily on reassembly. An air lock was found to be responsible, and the change shown in the diagram was made to overcome the difficulty, the old arrangement at A, and the new one at B.

Change in Piping.

A change in the piping was made, as shown, the other fittings being undisturbed. The regular discharge fitting was attached with a tee. A petcock was placed opposite the discharge and an operating rod for it was run up to the top of the engine. As soon as the oil feed stops, it is but a minute's work to open the petcock, and allow a small quantity of oil to be pumped out. When this is then closed, the oil flows through the discharge pipe, whether the stoppage was due to an air lock or to dirt.—Victor W. Page, Bristol, Conn., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

LITTLE SCHEME SAVES TIME

Mark Numerous Electric Wires on Modern Car With Paint of Different Colors.

A little dodge that saves much time on occasion is the marking of the numerous electric wires on the modern car with different colored paint. Simply band one wire with red, another with green, a third with blue, etc. In this way when it is necessary to trace down the various wires to locate some trouble that has developed, there is little hardship in conducting the search.

TO OBVIATE WEAK STARTING

Lack of Strength to Turn Over Crankshaft May Be Supplemented by Adding Another Battery.

When the starting motor for any reason lacks power to turn over the crank shaft it may be strengthened by coupling on another storage battery, connecting it in multiple so as not to increase the voltage. If the conducting wires are of sufficient size from the battery to the motor there will be a considerable gain in power output.

SHALLOW OIL PAN IS USEFUL SUBSTITUTE

May Be Used to Take Place of Wheeled-Jack.

Car May Be Swung Around in Small Garage Where Space for Turning and Maneuvering Is Limited—Oil Not Good for Tires.

One of those special jacks with wheels on it to enable cars to be maneuvered without trouble in close quarters is a handy thing to have, especially in the garage where several cars are kept, and where it is necessary to run them pretty close together in order to get them all in. Such a jack merely raises the front or the back end of the car and then the vehicle may be swung round to the desired point, doing away with a great deal of backing and turning and wheel twisting where the car must be worked around in the desired position under its own power.

But it appears that a car may be swung around in emergencies without the aid of a jack of the kind mentioned providing one of those shallow oil pans, such as is often slid under a car to catch any oil or grease drip from the motor or chassis, is at hand. We had stored our car in a garage where the space for turning and maneuvering was very small indeed, and in the absence of a jack with wheels on it, the garage attendant merely backed the car into the oil pan, which, by the way, had a slight film of oil and greasy material in it, says a writer in an exchange. With the rear tires standing on the pan, he merely pushed the car sideways and the tires slid across the oiled surface of the pan accomplishing the swinging process in a unique manner. And while it is not advocated that such a use be habitually made of the pan since it is none too good for the tires to get them in oil, nevertheless it is a kink worth knowing.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

The grade crossing must go.

A 40-horsepower automobile in England costs $25,000.

In Massachusetts there are 310,000 people licensed to operate motor vehicles.

In many makes of wire wheels the greatest care must be exercised in putting the locking devices in place.

In filling the radiator of the car allow enough water to pass into bring the level over the end of the vent pipe.

Abuse the car in its first thousand miles of service and it is likely to show the effects of the ill treatment throughout its career.

One motorist who has driven a multiple cylinder engine 6,000 miles, without having carbon cleaned ascribes it to the constant replacement of his engine oil.

After the water has been drained out of the cooling system the engine should be run for a few minutes thoroughly to evaporate all moisture remaining.

There may be anti-freezing mixtures for sale which are not injurious, but most of them contain calcium chloride, which eats away the solder holding the radiator together.

Quiet operation in the rear axle drive gearing is obtained by using angular teeth gears. This is also called skew bevel gearing, and noise is eliminated because there is very little play or backlash between teeth of this design.

ROCKING CHAIR IS INDORSED

French Authorities Declare Great American "Institution" to Be Physiologically Correct.

Nobody who has studied the rocking chair will be surprised to hear that the French Academy of Science has declared it the most hygienic of all seats instead of a mere American fad. It is, as the academy says, physiologically correct. The trouble with it is that it is not always psychologically correct. Its baneful effects are not on the rocker, but on the beholder. It is an all-around joy only when it is not rocked. New England ladies used to test a new neighbor by getting her to sit in a rocking chair. If she could resist rocking she was of the elect. This simple test of the nerves has made or marred a great many newcomers' popularity.

The advantage of the rocking chair is that it puts the body in perfect balance. The skull is kept in the proper position. But oscillation does not add to the benefit. It is good to find an invention which has been maligned because of misuse, indorsed by the scientists. Let these gentlemen next find something good to say about silk hats.

Parr's Great Age Discredited.

Is it worth while, when money is needed for legitimate objects, to answer the appeal to save from sale the cottage in which Thomas Parr lived? His claim to fame is that he lived to be 152 and that he did penance for immorality at 100. Careful inquiry last century discredited the tradition as to the number of his years. His age was attested only by village gossip and by quacks, who sold what they falsely called "Parr's Life Pills." Brought to court in what was alleged to be his 153d year, Parr died in the course of a few months, killed by excessive diet.—London Mail.

FIND ALTAR ROOM OF AZTECS

Interesting Discovery in Pueblo Ruin in New Mexico Has Recently Been Made.

The most satisfactory event to mark so far the work of the American Museum of Natural History in its excavation of the Pueblo ruin at Aztec, N. M., is the recent discovery of what was evidently the holiest shrine of this prehistoric people, records Popular Mechanics Magazine. It takes the form of a room, bare of furniture, but in perfect condition. The walls are plastered, and are painted in a glaring white with dull red borders and a frieze of triangular designs. On the ceiling beams are strange marks made by rubbing the palm and fingers in white paint, and then pressing them upon the wood. From these beams hang several strands of beautifully made rope, presumably for the support of some sacred objects. On the ceiling, too, is carved a serpent, two and one-half feet in length, and in design unlike anything known to the archeologists in charge.

GOLDEN SILENCE

If one can find no kindly word,
To speak of those we know;
No need repeat things one has heard,
Or disapproval show.
Not our to judge another's heart,
Best look into our own;
Not seek such knowledge to impart
That's better left alone.
If wagging tongues could be controlled,
Stilled meddlesome complaints,
How many more would be enrolled
As members of the saints.
—A. L. Soran.

SCHOOL NEWS

(Dale Langley—Richard Hawks, Reporters)

The Halloween season was celebrated with many happy and interesting events. Last week the children in all grades used Art and Handwork periods to transform their rooms into pumpkin fields, inhabited by witches, goblins and other Halloween spirits, so that by Friday all the rooms were artistically decorated for the parties and programs which were given.

The Seventh grade held a ghost story contest, prizes being awarded to the best story teller among the boys and girls. Matilda Clark was the winner for the girls and Howard Beverage was the lucky boy.

Mrs. Glidden of Laurel avenue opened up her home for a party given by the Junior Camp Fire Girls of the Sixth grade. Fortunes were told by a witch whose prophecies were told by means of a pantomime show, and games and delicious refreshments were enjoyed.

Last Friday evening the boys of the sixth grade were entertained with a Halloween party at the home of Verne Bradford. Games and a candy pull were features of the evening.

The Eighth grade held their annual Halloween party at the Kindergarten building Friday, Oct. 29. The guests were masked and were dressed in many fantastic costumes. The decorations were carried out in orange and black. The evening was begun with a grand march. Games were played and the evening was ended with dancing. Mrs. Woodruff acted as a gypsy fortune teller and decided many doubtful fortunes. Light refreshments were served.

The Fifth grade and all of the primary grades had programs in their rooms.

The contest for securing two hundred and fifty subscriptions for the Country Gentleman closed this week. The boys and girls worked so hard to earn the motion picture machine which was offered them by the Curtis Publishing company that they succeeded in obtaining more than the required number. Hilma Rhodes of the Sixth grade won the girls' prize and Chadwick Chandler of the Fifth grade received the prize for the boys.

Frank J. Walker died at his home, 102 East Mira Monte, Thursday morning, after a lingering illness.

He was born in Galveston, Texas, April 13, 1866, and has lived in California 24 years. He is survived by his wife, Lucy Washington Walker, and a sister, Mrs. Conoway Scott of Little Rock, Ark.

Funeral arrangements are not completed.

INTERESTING BOOTH

One of the most fascinating and mysterious booths in connection with the coming bazaar of the ladies of the Church of the Ascension will be that under the management and direction of Mrs. Wm. Carson Shaw, assisted by Mrs. C. L. Drake and Mrs. Hart of the Villa.

It is called "The Parcel Post Booth." Scores of the ladies in connection with the parish are writing their friends in every part of the country asking them to make this booth a great success by sending a package by parcel post, the contents of this package is unknown except by the sender and will be sold unopened for fifty cents. The value of the packages will vary considerably and will be unknown by the purchaser until they are opened. Many delightful surprises will await those buying them and the mystery and uncertainty of the contents will, of course, add much zest and fun surrounding the booth.

QUIET WEDDING

Miss Kate Brewington became the bride of Claude Vedder of Oregon, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her home on Windsor Lane, Rev. William Carson Shaw officiating.

The rooms were prettily decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns. After the ceremony they left for Ocean Park, where they spent several days. They will make their home here for the present.

A wide circle of friends will join the News in extending congratulations to the happy couple.

MARRIED

The Rev. W. H. Rawlings, LL. D., pastor of Bethany church, was united in marriage to Miss F. D. Butler, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Butler of Redding, England, on Oct. 28, at the Bible Institute, by the Rev. Dr. Horton, a few of the bridegroom's personal friends only being invited. After a few days spent in touring in Southern California the Dr. and Mrs. Rawlings have returned to take up their residence in Sierra Madre, at least for a time.

Mrs. Rawlings, like so many English ladies, used her beautiful home as a hospital for the wounded officers during the war, she herself taking charge of the same.

The bride expresses herself as delighted with the natural beauties of Southern California in general and Sierra Madre in particular. We understand that a public reception by Bethany church is being tendered their esteemed pastor and his bride this evening.

Dr. Rawlings preaches both morning and evening on Sunday next.

GOLDBERG-KOVE

Miss Lillian Goldberg, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Goldberg, was married to Charles Kove of New York on Wednesday evening, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends, at Christopher's banquet room in Los Angeles.

Rabbi Meyers of the Jewish Synagogue performed the ceremony midst a bower of pink and white blossoms. The bride was attired in georgette over white satin. She wore a veil and carried bride's roses.

Her sister, Cerna was the maid of honor and wore pink satin. Maurice Goldberg, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Goodman and family of Chicago, who came west especially to attend the wedding; Mr. Goodman being an uncle of the bride.

After receiving congratulations they left for San Diego, and on their return will reside in Los Angeles, where the groom is engaged in the produce business.

The couple received many beautiful wedding presents and telegrams of congratulations.

The bride has presided over the local postoffice most capably as chief clerk for several years and has many warm friends among her townspeople and carries to her new home their heartiest good wishes for a happy future.

MARRIED

Married, Thursday, Nov. 4, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride, 242 Santa Anita Court, in the presence of the immediate family, Winfred Wallace and William Sidney Barton of Altadena, Dr. Blue of Pasadena officiating.

The happy couple left for a prolonged stay in the Eastern States and Canada, after which they will return to their future home in Pasadena.

They are followed by the good wishes of their many friends.

FEED THESE CHILDREN

(By Mrs. J. H. Wright)

In the issue for October 30, the Literary Digest publishes a most touching appeal from Mr. Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the American Relief Administration, for funds to continue the admirable work of this organization in providing food for three and a half millions of undernourished, sick and orphaned children of Europe.

The appeal is too long to repeat in full in these pages, but it would be well if every American could read it as well as the editorial in the Digest commenting on it.

Condensed, the facts as stated in the two documents are these: The Relief Administration, with whose work we are all familiar, carried on relief measures in Europe with assistance from United States Government funds until the summer of 1919, when the government appropriation ceased. Since then the work has been continued with the aid of voluntary contributions and help from other organizations of a philanthropic character, including the Red Cross. During the first winter they fed and partly clothed between six and seven million children. This year conditions are improved somewhat owing to better crops, but there still remain three and a half millions whose only hope of food and any sort of clothing to withstand the cold weather depends on America. These children are in the districts ravaged by war and where economic conditions are still chaotic, many have lost both parents, and there are no supplies in those countries to provide for them. The money on hand will be exhausted by January and the Relief Committee needs twenty-three million dollars to carry the work through successfully for another season.

The Literary Digest sent one of its staff to Europe some months ago to thoroughly investigate and report on the work of the Commission and the real necessity for continuation, and this man's report shows unspeakable suffering and heartrending misery among the little ones. All of the children needing care cannot be given it, only those who have reached the state where they can no longer live without the aid are given food at the American kitchens. The doctors in charge have to refuse many who beg for food, asking, "Am I not thin enough?" "Do I weigh too much?" "Can't I come any more?" because there is not food enough to go round.

And these poor little tots stand in line at the American kitchens, barefoot and in utter rags and tatters, shivering in the cold and rain and snow, waiting imploringly for the one meal a day which is all that can possibly be spared for them.

Are they to wait in vain this winter and die by their pitiful thousands of cold and hunger, the innocent victims of the ravages of war—or will America save them?

The sum of ten dollars will provide a coat and boots and stockings and one meal a day for one child this winter! The Digest urges everyone who learns of this appeal to give as quickly as possible as many of these units of ten as they possibly can, and offers to receive this money and transmit it to the Relief Administration without one cent being deducted for expense of any kind. The Digest has started the fund with $25,000, thus insuring the saving of 2,500 lives. Is there any of us who cannot spare the price of at least one life? If we knew the life of any one of the happy little children of Sierra Madre was in danger, we would think ten dollars a tiny enough sum to give to save it and we would be rejoiced to think we could do it.

Because these children are three thousand miles across the ocean, do not let us be indifferent to them.

L. DIETZ, City Clerk.

Some of them have never known a happy moment, no one of them has had enough to eat for six long years, and they are just children, like the curly headed boys and girls who play about the homes in this town—just children paying for the sins and the greed of others. Can't we make the price a little less terrible?

The Relief Administration has disbursed over two billion dollars of relief funds from all parts of the world since the war began and the total overhead expense has been only three-eighths of one per cent the American directors working without pay. So any one giving to this fund may rest assured that over ninety-nine per cent of it will reach the children—it is for children and children only.

Send remittances to Child Feeding Fund, care The Literary Digest, 354-360 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Contributions in any amount will help. So do not hold back because you may not be able to give ten dollars. Any one who does not wish to send a contribution direct to the Digest may leave it at Hartman's Drug store. The amounts will be forwarded to the Digest and credit will be given the individual donors.

Thousands of Women

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments. Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGER, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 363 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

Many a Pretty Face Spoiled by Pimples

Not only are these pimples and blotches disfiguring, but they lead to serious skin diseases that spread and cause the most discomforting irritation and pain. Sometimes they foretell Eczema, boils, blisters, scaly eruptions and other annoyances that burn like flames of fire, and make you feel that your skin is ablaze. If you are afflicted with this form of skin disease do not expect to be cured by lotions, ointments, salves and other local remedies, as they can not possibly reach the source of the trouble, which is in the blood. Begin taking S.S.S. today, and write a complete history of your case to our chief medical adviser who will give you special instructions, without charge. ## The Milky Way to Health

Dairy Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

WHAT is a milk campaign? Just ask someone from Boston, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Spokane, Seattle or Kansas City—or in fact from any of the 34 cities that have completed campaigns during the past 18 months. These citizens will tell you what a milk campaign can do for health improvement, and it is obvious that when a movement spreads as rapidly as the milk campaign has, there is something to it. The milk campaign has brought results. That is why it is popular. It is the chief answer and remedy, all in one, to the question, "What's wrong with our children's diet?"—or our own diet, for that matter.

Too Much Undernourishment.

American citizens, who have always been noted for their progressiveness, will be surprised to learn that right in their own country there is a large per cent of undernourishment among children. Figures from many parts of the country prove this, according to the milk-utilization specialists of the United States department of agriculture, who are co-operating in the milk campaigns. In our greatest city, New York, for instance, it was found that the percentage of undernourished children had increased from 5 per cent in 1914 to 21 per cent in 1917-18, and that this increase had accompanied a decrease of 25 per cent in milk consumption.

Figures from country districts tell the same story. In one Missouri county, it was found on weighing and measuring 400 school children, that 50 per cent were 10 per cent and more underweight for their height and age.

Investigations showed that this condition was not confined to any one class—rich, poor and middle class, all being represented. Apparently, then, it is not lack of money which has brought about this condition, but rather lack of information.

As a means of combating this growing tendency toward undernourishment, the idea was developed of designating a period as milk weeks, and concentrating all available forces to the task of bringing before the people of a community the food value and healthful qualities of milk. This was the origin of the milk campaign.

How the Campaign Is Started.
A milk campaign is a highly-organized educational drive in a city or in a rural district. When it has been found by the citizens that a campaign is needed, the first step is to call on the state college of agriculture for co-operation. If the conditions warrant the campaign, the co-operation of the dairy division, United States department of agriculture is requested by the extension department of the college of agriculture. The college generally furnishes a corps of trained lecturers, and the dairy division lends assistance in planning the campaign, and contributes literature, exhibits, and some personal assistance if desired.

Neither the college of agriculture nor the federal dairy division will co-operate in a campaign until it has been found that the people of the locality really want it and are willing to work for it, that the supply of milk is clean and wholesome, and that the price of milk is right and will not be raised by the dealers, due to increased demand.

Effective Campaigns at Small Cost.

What does a milk campaign cost? Figures from campaigns already completed show that the cost varies from $85 to $8,000, depending largely upon the size of the area and the amount of advertising used. The cost of a campaign, however, is no indication of the results. Some of the least expensive campaigns have been the most effective. The campaign in Davenport, Ia., which brought unusually good results, was put on for the small sum of $65. Funds are contributed locally for the work.

Organization in carrying out such a campaign, especially in the larger cities, is of the utmost importance. Long before the starting of the active work, the committees in charge of various activities, such as publicity, finances, transportation, etc., are chosen, and the entire plan of the campaign is mapped out. The co-operation of the various local organizations is secured, such as board of health, newspapers, milk dealers, schools, churches, chamber of commerce, etc.; and each one is made to feel that it has an active part in the work of the campaign.

When the opening day has arrived, everything is in readiness, and every cog in the wheels of this great machine moves smoothly. Press notices and advertisements appear in the local papers. Posters on the food value of milk and displays in the store windows greet the eye at every turn. The demonstrators and lecturers hurry from point to point to meet their numerous engagements, spreading the gospel of milk and good health in factories, stores, schools, clubs, theaters, churches, and the meetings of labor unions and various other organizations.

Schools an Important Factor.

Of all these methods of spreading the message of milk, none has proved more effective than work in the schools. In fact, records show that there is a sharp line of demarcation between the results obtained with and without school co-operation. They vary from 10 to 30 per cent increase in consumption in cities where the schools take a part in the work, down to only 1 to 3 per cent where they do not.

Through the schools the children are reached directly. They learn from the women extension workers that milk will nourish their bodies and help them grow. Contests in designing milk posters and in writing milk essays also stimulate interest in the subject.

Children in city schools, and especially those of foreign extraction, know very little about milk. Many have never seen a cow, and when asked where milk comes from, answer, "From the store." One little girl thought a cow was four inches high.

Other children, however, seem to know more about it. One little girl said, "Milk makes one strong, healthy, and wise"; while another child vouchsafed the information that "the four glasses of milk in a bottle made him just four times better than he already was."

Bringing the Cow to School.

A novel method of urging the use of milk was tried out in a New Jersey city with success. Just as school was letting out a cow was brought up in a truck and milked in the street. At one school 600 children gathered around to see her milked. "Such excitement, you would have thought a circus was in town," wrote one of the extension workers. It took two policemen and five workers to restrain the excited crowd. One cow, of course, could not furnish enough milk for such a crowd, but an additional supply was brought up in trucks, and eventually everyone got a drink of real milk.

Most children like milk, anyway, and when milk is supplied to them in the schools they rarely leave a single drop in the bottle, especially if they can drink it through a straw. Parents often raise the objection, when advised to give their children more milk, that their boys or girls will not drink it. When the boys and girls come from school, however, and tell their parent that they want milk, they get it.

Undernourished Children Gain on Milk.

When a campaign is closed the work is followed up with milk-feeding demonstrations in schools. In all cases on record the feeding of milk has resulted in substantial gains in weight, rate of growth, and mental alertness. The results of the feeding demonstrations following the Massachusetts campaign, for instance, give some idea of what is being accomplished. In Hampden county 48 undernourished children were given a quart of milk daily for six weeks. These children made an average gain of 1 pound and 13.7 ounces, while the normal gain for healthy children carefully fed, for the same period, would have been only 11 ounces.

Eight of these children made phenomenal gains of more than five times what normally they would be expected to make. One of these was a lad who had never had milk except occasionally on Sundays. He was delighted with his gain of 64 ounces in six weeks.

Of course the results of milk campaigns in different cities and rural districts have varied greatly, but where a complete campaign has been put on, the increase in consumption of milk has been found to be from 10 to 30 per cent. Other dairy products, too, such as butter, cottage cheese and buttermilk, have come in for substantial gains. In Detroit, for instance, a 35 per cent surplus of milk which occurred during the spring season of heavy production, was eliminated. The use of whole milk increased 10 per cent, butter 15 per cent, cottage cheese 3 per cent. For one firm alone, the weekly sales of butter were increased 20,000 pounds, and of milk 50,000 quarts. Topeka, Kan., reports that the sales of butter jumped 30 per cent, and of milk 25 per cent.

MADE EXCHANGE OF SWORDS

American Officer in Havana Was Not to Be Outdone in Courtesy by Any Cuban.

Maj. E. Ormande Power, United States army, says the most embarrassing moment of his army life was in Havana when he was a lieutenant, in 1898. The United States had just taken control of Cuba and Lieutenant Power was sent to Havana to see about taking over some property. While in a restaurant he saw four Cuban officers, immaculately garbed. In true Latin manner they rose, bowed ceremoniously, and invited him to sit at their table.

"Sir," said one of the officers, rising, "it gives us the honor very distinguished to have an American officer join us—to have the valiant Americans in control of our country. My feeling is so great that I beg of you to give me the honor of accepting my sword."

With that he whipped out his beautiful Toledo blade, made of a steel the like of which no American ever possessed. As the young American awkwardly waited the Cuban stuck the point of his Toledo blade in the center of the table, bent it double, and as it whipped back into shape gracefully handed it to Power.

Feeling it up to him to do something gracious, Lieutenant Power begged the Cuban accept his sword to establish relations further. With that he whipped out his $10 blade, bought from a department store on the East side of New York, imitating the Cuban, he stuck the point in the middle of the table, bent it double—and it stayed bent!

Without a tremor, Lieutenant Power calmly handed the blade, now bent like a pretzel, to the Cuban, and made him a sweeping bow.—From the Arizona, New Official Newspaper of the American Army of Occupation.

DEMAND FOR HIPPO TEETH

Buyers Flock to Antwerp Four Times a Year to Attend Auction Where They Are Sold.

The chief ivory market of the world is in Antwerp, where buyers from everywhere assemble four times a year to attend an auction of this material. Most of it consists of the tusks of African elephants, but considerable quantities of hippopotamus teeth also figure in the sales. The latter, at an auction a few weeks ago, brought prices all the way from thirty-five cents to $5 a pound, according to quality.

A century ago hippopotamus ivory was much more valuable than it is today, because it was the preferred material for artificial human teeth, being very dense and hard. George Washington had a set of teeth made of it. But nowadays much better ones are manufactured of porcelain by the million.

At the recent auction above mentioned rhinoceros horns brought $13 a pound. They are ingeniously carved, mostly for curios. The horn of the rhinoceros, by the way, is one of the oddities of nature, being composed of closely compacted hair.

"Good Angel" Unappreciated.

Many times our best angels are not appreciated. The very fact that we are so accustomed to their ministry makes them commonplace. Bill was handy man at a certain college. He didn't get rich on what he did but he knew more about things than any one there. He just naturally took the responsibility for everything. But no one appreciated him. In fact he became something of a joke and everybody took occasion to shove off responsibility on him knowing that he could be counted on putting anything through that he undertook. So they worked the willing horse until he was picked up by a more appreciative concern and the college lost a good angel. Incidentally I might add, two men and a typist are doing the same work.—Grit.

Reading When Drowsy.

To read or study when tired or drowsy is to strain the eyes to a dangerous degree, writes W. M. Carhart in Public Health. Avoid evening study whenever possible. If you are using your eyes by artificial light be sure the light does not shine directly into the eyes, and try to have it come from behind and to the left side so as to avoid the harmful glare.

The Nation's Position.

We stand against all tyranny. We stand for the rule of the many in the interest of all of us, in a spirit of courage, of common sense, of high purpose, and with kindly justice toward every man and every woman.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Scottish Marriage Custom.

A favorite wedding day in Scotland is December 31, so that the young couple can leave their old life with the old year and begin their married life with a new one.

PROPHET'S GOURD

The "prophet's gourd" is a name given to the ricinus communis, or castor oil plant, referred to in Jonah 4:6-10, which afforded shade to the prophet before Nineveh, and which was supposed to have come up in a night and perished in a night. This plant was formerly a native of Asia, but is now naturalized in America, Africa and the south of Europe. It is allied to the cucumber, but in some species the fruit attains enormous sizes, specimens having been found to weigh as much as two and three hundred pounds. In India the plant is a tree, but in England it seldom attains a greater height than three or four feet. The seeds contain the oil so well known as castor oil.

Big Game in Africa.

As a white man with a gun, Lord Dewar was called upon once by the natives to deal with a rogue elephant, says the London Chronicle. He shot it, and it rolled over, but got up and charged him. All he recollected seeing was two big ears and a trunk, and the whole of his life passed before his mind in a second. But the animal suddenly swerved toward a native, and a shot at 20 yards brought it down. Where the railroads from the coast to Nairobi passed through the big game preserve, wild animals roamed about the track in freedom. While he was riding on the cowcatcher of the engine a rhinoceros charged the train and nearly derailed it.

SERGE OR SATIN FOR MID-SEASON

Fabrics Must Be Warm Enough to Save Wearing Coats Until Cooler Fall Days.

BEADING IS STILL IN FAVOR

Decorations Hold Sway Despite Recent Adverse Criticism—Red Belts, Bindings and Facings Are Popular.

With the first breath of cool weather the dying season's wardrobe begins to look like nothing at all, observes a New York fashion correspondent. And what is to be done for clothes, for something that resembles the proper sort of clothes, for this halfway period? That is the problem, and it is comparatively easy to solve when one regards the array of mid-season dresses that the shops are offering. Even on the streets and in the restaurants there have been evidences that, among fashionable women, there has been some thought of preparedness, for many are the new street frocks that have made their appearance. A study of them may save many mistakes.

The dresses of the intervening season are serge or satin, for they must be worn without coats and on the street, with hats and furs, just as any suit of the later fall days. Taffeta had its run through the summer months, but it has reached the time of discard. Black satin or meteor or any of the allied materials is the thing for street wear, and it has come back into its own. The newer black satin dresses are charming enough to lure even the purchaser who has decided to wait until winter is really upon us.

It sounds like an old story to say that the simpler the satin dress the more beautiful it is. Most of the newer satin gowns for the street are in black—a very few in the darkest of blues or in black—and they are cut on the straightest lines possible, with skirts just a trifle fuller than they have been and necks that are round or pointed, as the case of the individual taste may dictate. A touch of some white thing about the throat and the neckline is a usual thing. It is more demure in aspect than were the flaunting fashions of the spring and summer.

Skirts Are Full.

The skirts of these later dresses are full, and they take on this extra width in various and interesting manners. For instance, there is the paneled skirt, with loose and drooping breadths at front and back or at both sides, but usually there is a suggestion of an underskirt which gently hugs the figure and allows the fullness of the outer skirt to hang loosely over it. The sleeves are long and loose or tight, as the case may be. Some of them are fitted at the armholes and others are cut in so baggy a fashion as to have almost no shape at all. It all depends on the figure and what it can stand and what is chosen for a particular case, for there is coming to be more and more of a regard for the individual note. Each woman for her own charm and expression of personality—that is the new slogan, and it is expressing itself in every direction, especially in this case of the street frock.

Then there is the serge dress, which at this season of the year particularly demonstrates its place in the wardrobe of seasonable frocks. There is nothing to take its place—nothing that can step in to make the assertion that it is "just as good." About this blue serge frock there is everything that is smart and chic. The newer serge frocks are almost sure to be embroidered, at least those which are shown now are so trimmed. This is an embroidery that can show originality, and there is the best of chances for a distinctive gown when taste is employed in the selection. The most beautiful of the embroideries are done by hand, of course; they show all colors of the rainbow combined in one narrow strip. The Oriental quality of these stitchings is most charming, and, with the darkness and plainness and richness of a background of blue serge, they have the character of uttermost fineness. A few hand stitches can go a great way in this particular, especially if they are cleverly distributed and if their colors are chosen with a view to making the most of a small space.

Woolen Stitches Effective.

Woolen stitches on blue serge or tricot, or on any of these materials that in some way resemble one another, are as effective as anything can be, and on many of the newer fall frocks they are seen. Red is the color that does the most in this respect. There are some serge dresses that show only long red woolen stitches, with here and there a stray motif to accentuate the idea of the color combination. Then there are others which are more lavishly worked up in this same color combination. It is a combination that carries an appeal because of its cheerfulness.

Embroideries following the Romanian designs or those from Czechoslovakia are the most popular. It is the strip of many colors that has the first place in fashionable trimmings, and, applied to the frock of blue serge, certainly shows beauty and wealth of its texture. A frock of blue serge, one of the very newest to be seen anywhere, has a high grille sort of belt curved in front to a width greater than at any other place around the waist. This strip is embroidered solidly in reds and greens and purples. Then, to repeat this brilliant bit of color, there are bands at the hips, each about two and a half inches broad and twelve inches long. They are applied so that they hold extra side fullness for the skirt. The neck of the frock is plainly finished by a cord, and the sleeves are ended in the same way, so that all the trimmings are gathered about the waist and the hips. It is a novel grouping of embroidered strips, and it is beautiful as an example of what can be done with a small amount of embroidered trimming cleverly applied.

Beading on blue serge—and on satin, for the matter of that—criticized not long ago as not going well together, is still "going strong," one might say. This only goes to prove that the American woman wants what she wants when she wants it and will not be told that her cherished trimming may not be used in this combination.

Red Belts and Bindings.

Red belts and red bindings and red facings are popular with the newer blue serge frocks. These touches go a long way toward providing that necessary element of style. One little girl at tea in a gay hotel had a blue serge frock with a short and very full skirt, like the Parisiennes are wearing. The bodice was short and tightly fitted and a bit "blousy." The sleeves were tight. The one bit of trimming was a handsomely steel-studded red leather belt not more than an inch wide. And with this she wore a fuzzy turban of yellowish tan beaver cloth made to flop over one side of her head. She had tied this on with a tan dotted veil, under which her dark hair peeped out at little places, and her appearance was just about as smart a thing as one could hope to see.

MOTIFS OF PATENT LEATHER

Material Used in Appliqued Form as Well as to Make Small Bows to Trim Frocks.

Among the trimmings, patent leather is used in the form of appliqued motifs, as well as to make small bows to trim frocks of both cloth and velvet. An interesting suit in dual tone brown gabardine is ornamented with motifs of black patent leather. The skirt is very narrow, but the jacket flares at the sides. It is lined with a glossy black satin, glimpses of which are shown inside the standing collar, the cuffs and at the undulating edge of the basque fullness.

Two interesting suits were made by one of our foremost American designers in which patent leather is used in a remarkable way to form the trimming. A country suit of rose-colored homespun has very narrow bands of patent leather encircling the bottom of the rather long box coat, as well as the bottom of the skirt. There are at least a dozen of these bands. They are worked over with heavy gray yarn to form a design of black and gray. The skirt of this model is somewhat fuller than those intended for town wear and is set onto a yoke at hip length.

A second suit is of midnight blue velours banded in the same way with patent leather, which is worked over and over with a heavy tan silk to form a checkerboard pattern of black and tan.

Fantastic Footwear.

The smart Parisienne continues to manifest the greatest interest in fancy shoes. Perhaps the very high cost of footwear in Paris is one of the reasons why the fantastic styles are so popular. The fair Parisienne must have something to make a show for her money. The shoemaker, therefore, must, like the high-priced milliner, create an individual style for every customer. There is still a great vogue for strap slippers in black and white, with touches of bright color.

The KITCHEN CABINET

What appeals to the eye generally appeals to the appetite.

WHOLESGOME GOOD THINGS.

While grapes are in season make this fine relish to eat with meats:

Grape Catsup.—Boil the grapes until tender, put through a colander to remove the seeds and skins. Allow one pint of cider vinegar to three pints of grape pulp. Place in a kettle with two pounds of sugar and a bag containing the following spices: Two teaspoonfuls each of allspice, salt, cinnamon, cloves and white pepper. Boil until reduced to one-half the bulk, then bottle and seal.

Walnut Graham Bread.—Take one cupful of flour, two and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one-half cupful of molasses, two cupfuls of sour milk, two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of soda and one cupful of chopped walnut meats. Mix and bake as usual.

Rice and Almond Cream.—Blanch one-half cupful of almonds and cut them in thin strips. Put into a double boiler with the almonds three cupfuls of milk, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and, when hot, one cupful of well-washed rice. Cook until the rice is tender. When ready to serve dip it out into sherbet cups with whipped cream on top and garnished with apple jelly.

Salmon Salad.—Flake a little leftover salmon, add to a clear lemon jelly made without sugar. Put a thin slice of lemon in the bottom of an individual mold and fill with seasoned jellied salmon. Serve unmolded on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Nuts With Tomatoes.—Mix one cupful of nuts chopped (any variety preferred) with two cupfuls of bread crumbs. Moisten with cream, season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Mix the whole thoroughly, then beat in the yolks of three eggs and the stiffly beaten white of one. Spread the bottom of a platter with this mixture and on it arrange whole tomatoes. Dot with bits of butter and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with a butter sauce.

FOOD EXHIBITS AT STATE AND COUNTY FAIRS.

Thousands of women annually are disappointed, often discouraged and decide never to enter a contest again, because of a lack of understanding of the requirements of entry and often because of poor judgment in decisions rendered by the judge.

A woman may be a marvelous cook and good housekeeper, yet not be able to scientifically and justly judge foods, because of lack of training. Take jelly for example—flavor, consistency, transparency and general appearance all must be considered.

A score card worked out by those qualified by training as well as experience should be the criterion by which all judging should be done. We have all heard some very good cook remark over a glass of very opaque and altogether poor jelly: "This is the kind of jelly I like." Such a person for a judge will give the premiums to the kind of jelly she likes, thinking it is the best product. Unless we like the standardized perfect article, or will keep our likes in the background, we are unfitted to judge foods.

There should be an effort made at every fair to explain the score card for judging, so that every person who has an exhibit may know why she did not win and why some other woman did. In places where this method has been followed the women strive to reach the standards set and the following year a marked improvement is shown in the quality of exhibits.

Here are a few of the many things to be remembered by the amateur in jelly making:

The fruit must never be used after a heavy rain as it will be watery and tasteless.

When using fruits which lack pectin, or the thickening quality which makes the fruit jelly, apple or other fruit juices rich in pectin may be combined with the juice of such fruits as strawberry, which lack it.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham, Donner School

THE MANCHESTER TERRIER.

"Altogether I have had a rather hard life and so has my family," said the Manchester Terrier, "and I would like to tell it to anyone who would care to listen."

"In the first place of all I wish to tell all boys and girls and all men and women who may hear my story that it is the most cruel thing in the world to cut a dog's ears or a dog's tail for the sake of style."

"As a family they have often cut out our ears because they thought we looked more stylish that way. But I would like to say, and oh, I do hope people believe it, that it is one of the most wicked of things to do."

"We can't stop them from doing it and it is a very, very painful thing, oh, such a painful thing, to have one's ears trimmed. I'd like to say that we don't deserve it. We've always done the best we could for men and women and boys and girls and we would like to be treated humanely."

"We hope, oh, how we do hope, and our dog hearts beg of all people, that they'll make one great huge style of their own and it will be that it is not stylish to do anything to a dog that is cruel. Make a style which forbids the cutting of ears and tails and the trimming of our real flesh."

"For people don't have their ears trimmed and their toes cut. Boys have their hair cut, but that is quite, quite different. We just as soon have our hair cut. But not our flesh."

"Oh, people, men and women, boys and girls, won't you promise us that when you can you'll tell people not to do things that are cruel? Often they don't know, they don't understand. And you, people, do what you can to prevent such things ever, ever happening."

"Now as I've told you about our ears being tender and that we all beg of you never to cut our ears and never to cut any dog's ears or tail I want to tell you that we would love to be pets and that we have lots of nice things about us."

"We make fine burglar alarms. We would drive any old burglar out, and we keep our master and our mistress and their family so safe, so safe!"

"Do you know what we look like? Perhaps not, as we aren't as well known, I believe, as many other dogs."

"We have, each of us, a long, flat head and a thin beautiful nose which is black. Our eyes are small and dark and our necks (one aptee) are thin. In fact, we are quite thin, but we're good sized dogs."

"Yes, I've told you, I think, what we look like, and I've told you that we like people."

"After all, aren't dogs nice creatures? Don't we do our part in the world to make playmates for children, and save lives when we can, often at the risk of our own?"

"I'd like to feel we were liked for we're not mean and we like people."

"Lots of my family have won prizes at dog shows and that is where I was seen the other day by some one who promised to write my story for me."

"You see, people, I can't write. I haven't any pen or ink or pencil or typewriter—not even a toy typewriter as I've heard some children had."

"And I couldn't spell if I did write and no one would know what I was trying to say. Then, too, I couldn't express myself in words, for I'm not so very well acquainted with words. I know what they mean when they're said to me, but I don't speak the words, you see."

"So I was promised I'd have my story written for me, and the great point I want to make is, 'Love dogs, and treat them fairly, always, people, and remember that the Manchester Terrier family mustn't ever have their ears cropped, never, never. If you, any of you, ever have anything to say about it! And I've heard to my joy that people would not be cruel any more for now they understand.'"

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

A BOYS' LEAGUE OF NATIONS

The recent so-called "Jamboree" of the Boy Scouts of the World in England, which more properly should be called the First International Contests and Demonstrations of Boy Scouts, has frequently been referred to as a "Junior League of Nations." While in itself it could not be considered a real League of Nations, there is no doubt that this coming together of the picked boys from 34 nations will be one of the most potent forces in bringing about world peace.

The most virile young citizens of 34 leading nationalities, each with his own language and customs, and yet all united under one banner, all brothers in the greatest organization of youth that the world has ever known, living together, learning from each other, and in a very good way intimately associating for several weeks, makes it hard to believe that when they grow to be men there will not be between them a bond of fellowship which will make it difficult or impossible for the old style of international diplomacy to prevail. As one writer puts it:

The Beginning of a "Junior League of Nations" Many Called the Recent "Jamboree" of Scouts of the World in London. These Boys, Each From a Different Country, Are Writing in Each Other's Address Book.

"Manliness, self-respect and consideration for others are the goal of the true scout, whatever his country. Kinship with the world must inevitably follow national patriotism growing out of such training. The hope of the leaders of this and future conferences of the youth of all nations will play a significant part in the peace of the world may not be unfounded."

HAS MOST SCOUT MERITS.

Merit badges given for prescribed notable achievements are the chief outward evidence of meritorious effort on the part of boy scouts. To have four or five of them on his sleeve makes a scout the envy of all the tenderfeet in his neighborhood. To have thirty or forty makes their possessor one of the elect of the nation. But to have won more than any other member of the Boy Scouts of America ever did, brings distinction, indeed.

Alatau T. Wilder of Honolulu, who recently went to England to enter Oxford university, is the possessor of 59 merit badges, the highest number ever won by any scout. He has reached the rank of Veteran Eagle Scout. In a message to aspiring scouts he says:

"In order to win more than the usual number of merit badges there seems to me to be several qualities which a scout should cultivate in order to master successfully the different requirements. I believe that perseverance is the most valuable characteristic that will help a scout to be the proud possessor of numerous badges."

"Ambition is another important quality for the aspiring 'badge hog.' Scouts should have 'go ahead' enough to tackle a badge which may seem way beyond their powers at first. By learning how to pass the requirements which seem too difficult at the start, a great deal of knowledge which a scout would never have otherwise may be obtained. Reading books on the subjects and merit badge pamphlets, asking questions and getting direct information from men who make their living by the subject are ways by which a scout may master the requirements. Also, don't be afraid to ask questions from your teachers at school."

SAVES GIRL WITH SCOUT ROPE.

His scout rope with which he was practicing came in mighty handy when James LeMay, of Troop 7, Macon, Ga., heard the cries of children and ran to the rescue of ten-year-old Elizabeth Mitchell, who, while playing, had fallen into an abandoned well. She fell feet downward, 35 feet into eight feet of water, but managed to keep afloat until LeMay's rope was let down to her, and she was pulled up by the scout assisted by some of the girl's playmates.

"We are going to pick out the finest speaker in the town to introduce you to the audience," said the chairman of the committee on arrangements. "Don't do that," protested Senator Sorghum. "I need the benefit of contrast. I don't want to go to extremes, but if I had to make the choice, I'd rather be introduced by a silver-tongued orator than by a man who stutters."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Not Really Self-Supporting. A movie star, has a ranch near Los Angeles. He boasted of how he raised his own foodstuffs, cattle and hogs, but added "even at that it's not on what you could call a really independent, self-supporting basis." "How's that?" asked his friend. "Well," said he, "I still have to buy my gasoline in town, and so far I haven't been able to raise any silk shirts for my gang to wear on Sunday."
